A Garden that Lasts

Julian Duval President/CEO

Something that makes practicing horticulture special in a public garden like your San Diego Botanic Garden is planning for the long term. When I give a tour of the Garden I like to tell my guests "Let's all come back in 500 years and see how big the dragon trees are." That may not be practical but it does bring home the point that this Garden provides a home for some very long-lived plants.

Our iconic dragon trees (Dracaena draco) are one example. Another tree with a very long life span is the Queensland Kauri, (Agathis robusta), ours is already the tallest tree in the Garden where it anchors the Gazebo Lawn area. Still small and largely overlooked, there is a baobab from Madagascar (Adansonia za), located in the Old World Desert Garden that, given a couple of centuries, will become something visitors will want their pictures taken with.

Actually there is a long list of woody plants in the Garden that are still babies, belying what they will become; and it is with great satisfaction that I use the words "will become" and not just "can become." Ever since becoming self-supporting 20 years ago in 1993, establishing the long-term stability of the Garden has been a major focus. Public gardens are amongst the very few things that actually appreciate over time but that can only happen through securing their good care for the long term.

In the early 1990s, the Garden's future was uncertain. In fact, we had to be focused on the immediate short-term, given the financial challenges the Garden faced, but I firmly believe we have turned that corner. Not that we can ever take good financial management of the Garden for granted, but we can now focus on some of the long-term issues that are important in securing the Garden's future; I want you to understand I am talking many centuries here. Focusing on being true to our Mission and making sure that the Garden holds purpose for a growing audience of visitors and supporters is what now makes the Garden's future secure. There are things now under review that are important to this long-term stability and you will hear more at the beginning of next year.

If you are reading this, most likely you are a member of the Quail Botanical Gardens Foundation and clearly among those we thank for helping to ensure the stability of the Garden. The Garden's success is also, in large part, due to the dedication and talent of some individuals that are sadly no longer with us. The list is long and full of familiar names, but one who passed away recently and deserves to be honored is Don Walker.

Don was on the QBGF board when I arrived here 18 years ago and in fact he was one the people who provided me my first tour of the Garden when I was interviewed for the position of Executive Director. To this day, he ranks as one of the all-time horticultural luminaries of the San Diego area. Just two of the highlights of his legacy are having collaborated with Steve Brigham on producing the book "Ornamental Trees for Mediterranean Climates", which remains the best reference on trees for our area. Don was also the person who founded and then led the San Diego Horticultural Society, which is still one of the most supported and attended such groups in North America.

Don was an important member of the QBGF board when the Foundation warded off the closing of the Garden by taking over its management from the then cash-strapped San Diego County. He also became a docent for the Garden and soon became one of the docent class teachers. However, while Don was a professional graphic designer his real passion was "hands on" horticulture. Don was an important "go to" plant expert for the Garden and one of the best for knowing which plants performed well in Southern California. He adopted the Rain Forest area as his particular focus and came out every Thursday and spent the day working hard to keep this very popular area in the Garden in great shape.

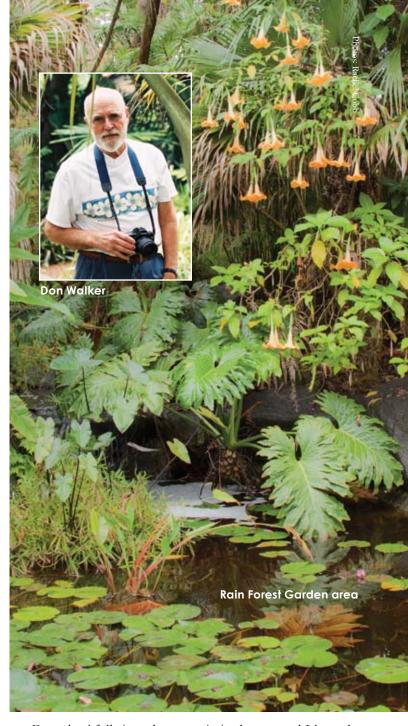

Don would, I am sure, be very pleased with the Rain Forest area now given the many volunteers who have helped Lesley Randall, Collections Curator here at the Garden, build on Don's Rain Forest work and have it realize its potential as one of the genuine beauty spots in the Garden with incredible plant diversity and its spectacular water fall.

The Garden is forever grateful for Don's generous volunteer work at our events, which included his main squeeze, the annual Fall Plant Sale. He loved it, helped manage it and trumped most other volunteers with the hours he dedicated to the effort. Well, the Fall Plant Sale tradition continues on October 19 and 20 this year and it's not to be missed. If you like plants you will see why Don loved it and worked hard to make it the best opportunity to acquire plants anytime and anywhere in Southern California.

We will always remember Don as a stellar volunteer for the Garden and, in addition, there is also paid staff that deserves credit for helping to bring the Garden to where it is now. One of those individuals is Dave Ehrlinger. Dave has been the San Diego Botanical Garden Director of Horticulture for over 11 years and has been at the helm of the Garden's horticulture during a time when it has made its greatest advances in improving and adding to the visitor experience. The list of improvements is long and includes expanding the Garden's acreage and the establishment of the Hamilton Children's Garden. Dave has also seen the Garden greatly advance its conservation mission as we are now members of The Center for Plant Conservation and The North American Plant Collection Consortium.

Dave made it known of his intention to retire this fall more than a year ago. This gave us lots of time to plan for the transition for this key staff position. Fortunately, we were able to secure a grant from the Stanley Smith Horticultural Trust to allow for an extended overlap while Dave is still here with our new Director of Horticulture. We early on advertised the opening of this position and received applications from qualified persons from all over the US and three foreign countries. It was not easy paring down the list, but in the end we found the best fit from the person coming the shortest distance.

Paul Redeker, started as our new Director of Horticulture this past August and was most recently the Director of Horticulture over several years for our neighboring public garden next to the campus of Cuyamaca College: the Water Conservation Garden. We are fortunate to have caught Paul's interest in taking on this job. He has great skills in design and project management, which will be critical as we pursue continued design refinement and implementation of the Education and Events Pavilion.

Dave thankfully intends to remain in the area and I know he wishes to stay involved in the Garden. In fact, Dave will be leading the Garden's Member Tour to Israel and Jordan next spring. This trip will be very special not only because of the rich plant diversity and equally rich human cultural diversity, but also because we will be welcomed by our sister public garden, the Jerusalem Botanical Garden (JBG). Our good friends at JBG will be very involved in making this trip an especially rich and enjoyable chance of a lifetime.

I do dream about a grand reunion in the Garden of the many people who have been so important in caring for this jewel, the San Diego Botanic Garden. Yes, something like 500 years from now, let's all come back to look-over how the garden has grown and prospered and yes to see how big those dragon tree have become.

Volunteer and Docent News

August Volunteer of the Month: NANCY MCMAHON

Originally from California and a graduate from UCLA, Nancy McMahon always had a knack for gardening, which stemmed down from her grandmothers. After she married, she and her husband moved east to Colorado and then Washington State. In Washington, Nancy worked in the Administration department at Washington State University for 34 years. When her husband passed in 2009, Nancy moved back to California in the Carlsbad area to be closer to their daughters. Back in Colorado, Nancy found she had limited growing conditions so was interested in identifying wildflowers and mushrooms, and growing houseplants. Once in Washington, she started a flower and vegetable garden grown from seeds. Finally, here in California, Nancy started a vegetable garden and grew mixed succulent pots. Nancy works mostly in propagation and in the Mediterranean Gardens, she volunteers at the Plant Sales, and sometimes the Saturday work parties. Nancy enjoys the great people she gets to work with and the beautiful surroundings of the Garden.

September Volunteers of the Month: SHARON METZ

This Wisconsin native fell in love with the beautiful dahlias and roses her father grew in Milwaukee as a child. As time went on, Sharon married and she and her husband moved to Arizona for a bit and then Texas where they opened a retail store. Eventually Sharon and her husband settled in San Diego where she worked as a buyer for her landscape contractor. Sharon still says that was by far the most fun job she ever had the pleasure of working. She came across an ad for volunteers at San Diego Botanic Garden and knew it was the perfect fit for her. Sharon has worked in several areas of the garden, special events, and, on occasion, can be found driving the cart for visitors. She enjoys the company of the people she has met at the Garden and what she enjoys most is the serenity and beauty of the garden. Being around dedicated enthusiastic people who love their work is also a something she cherishes.

October Volunteer of the Month: KAREN O'NEILL

Karen O'Neill, born and raised right here in California, grew up on a property that boasted about 100 grand oaks, orange and lemon groves, and strawberry fields. Up until 8 years ago, Karen and her husband decided to leave the corporate world and pursue a love for the nonprofit and education sector. In this field, Karen worked in Human Resources at various San Diego companies. Her very first visit to the Garden was back in 2001 to see the ever popular corpse flower. Now, you can find Karen volunteering at the gift shop and during special events, and she takes part in designing the Botanic Leaf print cards. She enjoys volunteering alongside all the wonderful volunteers, staff and meeting all the interesting guests from all over the world. She feels the garden has something for everyone!

Fall Plant Sale

By: Elizabeth Woodward and Liz Rozycki

On October 19 and 20, 2013 the San Diego Botanic Garden will hold our 31st annual Fall Plant Sale. If you have been to this sale in the past, you know that this sale features the absolute best selection of plants at the most amazing prices. If you have never attended the Fall Plant Sale before, you need to make sure that you check out this year's event to see what you have been missing.

The Fall Plant Sale is one of the Garden's biggest fundraisers and is organized by over 150 volunteers who transport, tag, price, groom and organize the plants for weeks prior to the sale. The plants come from over 100 generous local growers and nurseries in San Diego County in addition to many plants that are propagated right here at the Garden.

The Fall Plant Sale is held annually in October because this is the best time to begin planting in your Southern California garden so the plants can get established well in time for the blooming season. We have everything from your traditional garden favorites to many unusual plants that you simply won't find at your neighborhood garden center. We also have an extensive selection of houseplants and succulents.

In addition to plants, the Fall Plant Sale event includes a used book sale, homemade jams and jellies, Bakery Shoppe, silent auction and the Botanic Attic which features new and gently used garden items.

Shop early for the best selection! The sale begins on October 19 at 9am. Bring a wagon or garden cart since shopping carts are limited. Can't make it on Saturday morning? Not to worry, Saturday afternoon and all day Sunday are also great times to shop as the area is less crowded and you can take advantage of expert advice from volunteers and staff. Last chance sales will be available at half price on October 21 from 9am to noon. As always, members are FREE and, this year only, you can bring a friend along with you for FREE!

Our volunteers and staff love to propagate plants here at the Garden. Here are a few interesting and unique plants that you will find at this year's Fall Plant Sale:

Mackaya bella or the forest bell bush is a native of South Africa. Lavender blooms show up in spring on the 6-8 foot evergreen bush. It does best in part shade.

Scabiosa farinosa is called the dwarf pincushion bush. It forms an almost perfect mound of glossy dark green ruffled foliage that is highly ornamental in its own right. Top that with lavender button flowers for most of the spring and summer and this plant becomes a show stopper! It stays short (under 2ft) but if given room will continue gently widening its mound to 3-4 ft.

Dracaena draco, the dragon tree, slowly grows to 15-25 feet tall and just as wide. It is one of our iconic plants here at the garden but surprisingly is seen frequently planted about town.

Encephalartos altensteinii and Encephalartos natalensis are both cycads endemic to South Africa. They may look like palms but are more closely related to pines. They have separate male and female plants and each produces a very ornamental cone. These cycads add a stunning focal point and a collector's touch to your garden.

We have hundreds more from the common scented geraniums to the more unique and rare official hibiscus of Hawaii, Hibiscus brackenridgei. In addition, we highlight California natives with a large selection because fall is the best time to plant them.

Arbor Vitae Guild Members

Ruth Larabee believed in the importance of preserving open spaces and gardens for the enjoyment and education of the community. This belief led her to bequeath her 30-acre estate for just that purpose, a gift that became San Diego Botanic Garden. Planned giving is the cornerstone of the Garden's history and the key to its future.

The Arbor Vitae Guild was established to honor the Garden's friends who have indicated that they have included the Garden in their will, trust, or other deferred giving method. Gifts of all sizes are welcome, as they ensure the Garden's natural beauty and vitality for the enjoyment of future generations. We invite you to begin a conversation about how a planned gift can benefit you now and the Garden in the future. Please contact Tracie Barham, Director of Development, at 760/436–3036 x216 for more information.
